—A new game of chance has been intro-duced into Memphis. It is usually played in a beer saloon by two or more players. If four engage in it a square is drawn upon a table with a piece of chalk, and at each corner of that square a piece of loaf sugar is placed. Each player puts up a nickel in the center of the square. The piece of sugar upon which the first fly lights settles the game, and the owner of the piece of sugar wins the pot, or twenty cents. In fly-time the game can be made quite lively. It is a square game, the flies not being "cappers" for any of the players.
